

LYCOMING

COLLEGE REPORT September 1973/Volume 26, Number 7

HOMECOMING PARENTS' WEEKEND

OCTOBER 20 NOVEMBER 3

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

TUITION AND THE BUDGET

As announced in the most recent issue of the catalog, the comprehensive fee for 1974-75 will be increased to $1,150 per semester. Residence hall charges remain at $250, but board has been increased to $325 per semester. This represents an addition of $50 per semester to the comprehensive fee and $25 to each semester of board.

The Board of Trustees is certain that students and their parents will understand the necessity for this small upward revision of charges. The College's costs are subject to all of the inflationary pressures of our economy, and we must increase instructional and staff salaries if we are to maintain the high level of proficiency and personal attention which has marked Lycoming during the past few years.

We have been meeting with faculty and student leadership for some time now to effect careful economies in non-personnel items of our annual budget. Although we have been reasonably successful in this project, it is now certain that the College must also reduce personnel in order to give necessary support to those colleagues who continue on the faculty and staff.

Faculty and staff consultation has enabled us to plan for a small reduction of personnel over the next two years which will leave the academic program and services essentially in their present strength. National socio-economic conditions will reduce the enrollment of all privately-supported institutions to numbers considerably below the high point of the late sixties and early seventies. Lycoming has been most fortunate in its experience thus far, and we have every reason to be confident that our enrollment will stabilize at 1,250 to 1,350 students. Interestingly enough, this was the size that our College planning anticipated twelve years ago.

HAROLD H. HUTTON
President of the College

PRIVATE EDUCATION Needs Your Support-Now.

NEW FACES

DR. VIOLA L. CATT comes to Lycoming as an assistant professor in psychology. After earning her bachelor of arts, magna cum laude, at Indiana University where she was a research assistant in the honors programs, she taught a year at the United Fund Center for Handicapped Children in Indianapolis. While earning her master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees at the University of Denver, Mrs. Catt was a National Institute of Mental Health research assistant a year each in Littleton and Denver, Colorado, and a research assistant in the University of Denver psychology department, where she was an instructor in the spring and summer 1973 quarters. She has co-authored several technical reports. Viola has a five-year old son Bruce.

RICHARD R. ERICKSON will be a teaching fellow in physics to substitute for Dr. Willy Smith who is on sabbatical until September 1974. As a National Merit Scholar he earned his bachelor of arts at the University of Minnesota with honors in astronomy (summa cum laude) and in mathematics (magna cum laude) and a minor in geology. While earning Phi Beta Kappa honors, he was a lab instructor for an introductory astronomy course for three years and gave lectures on astronomy and geology to grade-school children.

After graduation he spent a year at Churchill College - University of Cambridge on Woodrow Wilson, National Science Foundation, and Churchill Foundation fellowships doing radio astronomy research.

While earning his doctor of philosophy at the University of Chicago, where he had a three-year NASA traineeship, Richard taught geology and astronomy at Dominican College in Racine, Wisconsin, astronomy at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and worked at the Yerkes Observatory in Williams Bay.

Dr. Erickson's publications include "Membership of the Young Open Cluster NGC 6823" in Astronomy and Astrophysics and two articles co-authored with W. J. Luyten. His wife's name is Caroline.

OWEN J. MAHON, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, earned his bachelor of science and master of arts in economics at its Wharton School and has completed all course work for the doctorate. He was an instructor at Wharton and its Harrisburg and Reading extensions while doing graduate work. Owen comes to Lycoming as an assistant professor of accounting from Bucknell where he was very active on university committees.

Professionally, Owen has been a consultant for several large national trade associations since 1957. Over the same sixteen years he has served on the examinations board of the American Institute for Property and Liability Underwriters.

Active in community affairs, Owen has been chairman of the Lewisburg Planning Commission, board president of the Himmelrich Public Library, treasurer of Kiwanis, and finance officer of the American Legion. He and his wife, Irene, have three children: Owen J. Jr. 21, Susan 17, and Amy 6.

KATHLEEN MCGINNIS comes to Lycoming as an instructor in political science. She received her bachelor of science in social science from Indiana University of Pennsylvania and her master of arts in foreign affairs from the University of Virginia where she is a doctoral candidate. While pursuing graduate studies, Kathleen was the recipient of DuPont Fellowships and was a teaching and research assistant in her department.

LARRY R. STRAUZER, a 1959 Lycoming graduate who has taught part-time at his alma mater, is now a full-time instructor in sociology. Larry has been project director for the Central Pennsylvania Multi-County Corrections facilities project under SEDA since 1971. He has also taught continuing education courses at Pennsylvania State University off-campus locations.

After graduation Larry became a special education teacher for Lycoming County. He has had varied experience as the chief

Julius Jacobson, probation officer for Lycoming County, as a senior caseworker and work-release coordinator for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, and as a full-time instructor in Penn State's College of Human Development. He did work in clinical psychology at Bucknell University and earned his master of public administration from the University of Arizona.

Larry and his wife, Keigh, have two children - Ned, eleven and Heidi, nine.

STANLEY T. WILK, assistant professor of anthropology, comes to Lycoming from Lafayette College where he was named Jones Lecturer in recognition of superior teaching and scholarship in 1972. While in Easton, he also taught anthropology to gifted junior and senior high school students.

The native of Bronx, New York received his bachelor of arts from Hunter College with honors in anthropology. While earning his doctor of philosophy at the University of Pittsburgh he had a teaching assistantship for one year and an Andrew Mellon Pre-doctoral Fellowship for two years.

Dr. Wilk's research experience includes field work in Pueblo, Mexico in 1964 and 1966-67 and in the Easton area for the Medical Sociology Center of The Pennsylvania State University.

Stanley has read a number of papers at annual meetings of the American Anthropological Association (he will read one this fall) and at regional groups. This September "Of Myths and Culture Heroes" was read at the IXth International Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences. In addition to reviewing books for American Anthropologist, he has several articles in circulation: "Magic, Science, and Religion", "Peasantry: An Upper Limit", "Terminal Loyalties in a Mexican Community", and "Idealism and Materialism in Cultural Theory".

Stao and his wife, Rhona, have two sons - David, 6 and Joshua, 3.

ROBERT A. ZACCARIA, assistant professor of biology, comes to Lycoming from the University of Virginia where he earned his doctor of philosophy while receiving a National Science Foundation Academic Year Grant in 1968-69 and National Institute of Health traineeship in Developmental Physiology for three years. He had earned his bachelor of arts in biology and his collegiate-professional certificate for secondary education at Bridgewater College, Virginia.

Dr. Zaccaria's teaching experience includes three years in the secondary schools in Augusta County, Virginia, director of the Natural Science Section, Project Opportunity in Nelson County, Virginia, and laboratory instructor in biology, anatomy, and embryology at the University of Virginia. He has had two articles published in the American Zoologist.

Bob and his wife, Pat, have two sons: Alan Andrew, three months and Robert Anthony, Jr., six.

CAMPUS NOTES

A $6,600 NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION GRANT has been awarded to the chemistry department. Lycoming has matched the grant to buy a Nuclear Magnetic Resonance spectrometer with oscilloscope. Students and faculty will use the instrument primarily to determine and/or confirm the structure of chemical substances. New courses will be possible and teaching aids for present classes will be improved. Dr. Andrew B. Turner, assistant professor of chemistry, and several students have begun using the instrument to investigate intermediates in the synthesis of tropane alkaloid analogs.

A $5,000 LIBRARY GRANT, the maximum available under Title II of the Higher Education Act of 1965, has been received from the College Library Resources Program of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

A $2,000 SPERRY AND HUTCHINSON FOUNDATION GRANT to sponsor a series of public lectures on "Cultural Survival: Thoughts on the Future" has been received.

ERNEST D. GIGLIO, associate professor and chairman of political science, will serve as the first Director of the Internship Program. Immediately responsible to the Dean of the College, he will be responsible to encourage departments to participate, to maintain the quality and spirit of the program, to prepare written agreements between the College and participating agencies, to review each internship proposal, and to submit periodic reports on the status of the program. Readers interested in any aspect of the internship program should contact Dr. Giglio.

VIRGINIA R. ARROYO, assistant professor of sociology, spoke on "Understanding China" during the summer at the Williamsport and Loyalsock Kiwanis Clubs, the United Methodist Conference at Susquehanna University, and on WMPPT local radio.

WILLIAM P. BRITTAIN, assistant professor of psychology, presented a paper titled "Some Developmental Effects of Ventromedial Hypothalamic Lesions on Spontaneous Activity in the Male Rat" at a Knoxville meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology.

CANDICE M. CHIRGOTIS '73 and LYNN A. FISCHER '74 co-directed the July Drama Workshop sponsored by the Junior League in conjunction with the College and Williamsport Area School District. Children in second through ninth grades participated in the program.

ANTHONY L. GRILLO, librarian, has been elected 1973-74 chairman of the Susquehanna Library Cooperative.

MRS. CHARLES W. LUPPERT and GEORGE MILLER were honored at a retirement dinner given by the Food Service Department. John F. Eck was master of ceremonies. Russell Bloodgood, food service manager, was the speaker.

Associate Editor—DALE V. BOWEN '59

MAURICE A. MOOK, professor of anthropology emeritus, will be listed in The Fifth Annual International Directory of Anthropologists this year. He has reviewed "Amish Beliefs, Customs, and Discipline" by Gerald S. Lestz for the Journal of American Folklore.

MICHAEL G. ROSKIN, assistant professor of political science, led a discussion on "Is There A Neo-Isolationism in the United States?" at the Amerika House, U.S. Cultural Center, Berlin, Federal Republic of Germany after accompanying eleven Lycoming students on a Cultural Tour of the Soviet Union in May led by LEO K. WINSTON, assistant professor and chairman of the foreign languages and literatures department.

While photographing women lined-up to buy eggs in Odessa, Mike was forced to go to the police station by three burly Soviet citizens where he was detained for an hour and accused of "bad behavior". When asked if he was under arrest, he was told, "No, you are here voluntarily."

"I suspect that they were concerned that such a picture would suggest food shortages," Dr. Roskin said. "Both the police and the men who filed the complaint wanted to take my camera. But I told them they would have to shoot me first. They gave up. My requests to call the United States Embassy in Moscow were ignored, and that is against the U.S.-USSR Consular Convention. The incident itself was minor and probably typical. But the flaunting of the Consular Convention is more serious."

FERDINAND D. SCHOEMAN, assistant professor of philosophy, will have his manuscript, "A Rational Approach to the Foundations of Ethics: Ethica in ordine geometrico demonstrata" published in The Journal of Value Inquiry in late 1973.

DR. WILLY SMITH, associate professor of physics at Lycoming since 1966, left in July for Europe where he will spend a sabbatical year mostly in Germany and Spain. He will work on a book manuscript and possibly teach part-time at a European University or college before returning in August 1974.

JOHN M. WHELAN, JR., assistant professor of philosophy, will have his review of Hanna Pitkin's "Wittgenstein and Justice" published in The Philosophical Review.

SWAZILAND was represented by four Lycoming students at the five-day annual Model United Nations Conference in New York. The delegation itself was international with KURT D. HALL '76 from Bogota, Columbia; ISSA HATEM '76 from Jerusalem, Jordan; FRED E. HICKOK '76 from Bedford, and ROBERT C. HOWDEN '73, chairman, from Wyckoff, New Jersey.

AN ACTIVE SUMMER ON CAMPUS saw facilities put to good use by over 4,000 people in sessions ranging from Summer term classes, through cheerleading and drill team acrobats, to five freshmen orientation sessions. Business manager, Bill Baker, coordinator for summer activities, reports rental of college facilities and services by groups such as the Pennsylvania School Board Association, PTA State Leadership School, Upper Atlantic Regional School of Missions, and Central Pennsylvania Conference Women's Society Workshop.
